

Shannon Georgecink has used her passion for non-profit service and volunteerism to fuel a career centered around strengthening health, education and community services. Committed to the belief that successful communities thrive when its residents are supported through care of the whole person, Shannon's work in the greater Atlanta community has spanned many issue areas including public education policy and at-risk women and children. She is also a member of the Atlanta Regional Commission's Regional Leadership Institute Class of 2024.

In her most recent role, she served as the Vice President of Advancement at Atlanta Technical College and the Executive Director of the Atlanta Technical College Foundation, Shannon led the foundation through record growth, raising more than $6 million in her three-year tenure and facilitated the acquisition of land to the foundation's portfolio. She also helped draw new leadership to the board of directors and established best practices for the organization, which earned Role Model Board distinction from the Technical College System of Georgia for three consecutive years.

Combining her knowledge of community issues and strategic planning, Shannon previously served as the executive director of Metropolitan Counseling Services, ensuring that quality, affordable mental health services were available to every adult needing care. One of the only sliding fee scale centers in Atlanta, the organization provided client focused care that allowed for treatment as long as it was needed. The center doubled its operating budget during Shannon's tenure and grew its grant awards by more than 600 percent.

Shannon also served as the Advancement Communications Director at Marist School, as well as the Director of Communication at The Georgia Partnership for Excellence in Education.

She actively supports the Atlanta community by serving as an appointed trustee and treasurer of the Fulton DeKalb Hospital Authority, owner of the Grady Health System. Shannon is a past member of the Young Men's Service League, Milton Chapter and a sustaining member of National Charity League, Milton Chapter, where she served as president of the board of directors. She is a past member of the Junior League of Atlanta Board of Directors, serving terms in 2011, 2012, and 2013. Shannon also served on the Soaring Hawks Foundation Board of Directors, a 501c3 she helped create in order to better support her community elementary school. The foundation helps supplement the Title 1 elementary school's budget by tapping into a robust network of community businesses and other stakeholders to provide a rich learning environment for every student.

She is a past member of the Board of Directors for Rainbows, Inc., Georgia Chapter, and has served on the Northbrook United Methodist Church leadership team in multiple capacities.

Shannon is a graduate of Texas Christian University in Fort Worth, Texas.

She lives in Roswell with her husband, T.J. They have two children, a daughter who is a senior at Texas Christian University, and a son who is a sophomore at the University of Nebraska, and one very spirited dog.
